WASHINGTON – The United States on Monday announced nearly $6 billion in additional military and budget assistance for Ukraine as President Joe Biden uses his final weeks in office to surge aid to Kyiv before President-elect Donald Trump takes power.

Biden announced $2.5 billion in additional security assistance for Ukraine.

Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen said the United States has made available $3.4 billion in additional budget aid to Ukraine, giving the war-torn country critical resources amid intensifying Russian attacks on Ukrainian civilians and infrastructure.

"At my direction, the United States will continue to work relentlessly to strengthen Ukraine's position in this war over the remainder of my time in office," Biden said in a statement.

Biden's announcement includes $1.25 billion in military aid drawn from U.S. stockpiles and a $1.22 billion Ukraine Security Assistance Initiative package, the final USAI package of Biden's time in office.

Under USAI, military equipment is procured from the defense industry or partners, rather than drawn from American stocks, meaning it can take months or years to arrive on the battlefield.

Yellen said in a statement the direct budget assistance, provided in coordination with the U.S. Agency for International Development and the State Department, marked the final disbursement under the 2024 Ukraine Security Supplemental Appropriations Act.

Congress has approved $175 billion in total assistance for Ukraine since Russia's invasion of its neighbor nearly three years ago, according to the non-partisan Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. Recently the Russians have been using North Korean troops to bolster their fighting position.

North Korean forces are experiencing mass casualties on the front lines, with 1,000 of their troops killed or wounded in the last week alone in Russia's Kursk region, White House spokesperson John Kirby said Friday.

Biden said the new assistance will provide Ukraine with "an immediate influx of capabilities that it continues to use to great effect on the battlefield and longer-term supplies of air defense, artillery, and other critical weapons systems."

Trump wants military to deal with deportations

Daniel Gonzalez Arizona Republic | USA TODAY NETWORK

President-elect Donald Trump repeatedly has indicated he plans to use the military to help carry out mass deportations by declaring a national emergency to stop what he calls an "invasion" at the border.

But it is questionable whether Trump would have the legal authority to deploy the military to be directly involved in immigration enforcement even if he declares a national emergency, experts say.

Declaring a national emergency is "not going to give him all the powers that he wants," said Ariel Ruiz Soto, a senior policy analyst at the Migration Policy Institute, a nonpartisan research organization.

While active-duty military personnel and National Guard troops have been used multiple times in the past to provide support to the Border Patrol along the southern border, they have not been used to carry out actual immigration arrests and other enforcement duties, Ruiz said.

That is because there is a law on the books, the Posse Comitatus Act, that prohibits the military from being used for law enforcement purposes, Ruiz said.

"They could patrol the border, but they could not necessarily arrest and remove (undocumented immigrants) by themselves," Ruiz said. "That continues to be the Border Patrol that would do that at the border and ICE in the interior."

Trump, however, has said he plans to declare a national emergency and invoke two other laws, the Insurrection Act and the Alien Enemies Act, to give him the legal authority to use the military to help carry out mass deportations, according to the Brennan Center for Justice.

Trump's use of the military in immigration enforcement stems from the Heritage Foundation's Project 2025 conservative blueprint for the next presidency. The document calls for the next president to take the unprecedented step of using active-duty military personnel at the border to carry out arrests.

In addition to finalizing the southwestern land border wall, the next Administration should take a creative and aggressive approach to tackling these dangerous criminal organizations at the border," the document said. "This could include use of active-duty military personnel and National Guardsmen to assist in arrest operations along the border – something that has not yet been done."

During a recent interview with Time magazine, Trump reiterated that he plans to use the military to help carry out mass deportations and would go up to the "maximum level of what the law allows."

The Posse Comitatus Act, Trump said, "doesn't stop the military if it's an invasion of our country, and I consider it an invasion of our country. We have criminals coming into our countries that we've never seen, we've never seen before."

During Trump's first term in office, Trump declared a national emergency to access billions of dollars earmarked for military construction projects to build a wall along the southern border after he was unable to get Congress to approve his request for border wall funding.

Some Republicans opposed Trump declaring a national emergency to build a border wall in 2019, Ruiz noted. But the political climate has changed and Trump may not face the same pushback in his second term in declaring a national emergency to use the military to help carry out mass deportations, Ruiz said.

Ukraine says it brought home 189 POWs in swap with Russia

KYIV, Ukraine – Ukraine and Russia carried out a new exchange of prisoners of war on Monday, with Kyiv bringing home 189 former captives, President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said Monday.

Zelenskyy thanked the United Arab Emirates and other partners for facilitating the swap.

"The return of our people from Russian captivity is always very good news for each of us. And today is one of such days: our team managed to bring 189 Ukrainians home," Zelenskyy said on the Telegram messaging app.

The Russian Defense Ministry reported earlier Monday on the prisoner swap, saying each side had freed 150 prisoners of war. There was no immediate explanation of the discrepancy in the numbers reported.

Pelicot won't appeal guilty verdict in mass rape trial, lawyer says

PARIS – Dominique Pelicot, sentenced to 20 years in jail by a French court for repeatedly drugging and raping his then-wife Gisele for almost a decade and inviting dozens of strangers to rape her, will not appeal, his lawyer said on Monday, although a new trial will take place as 17 co-defendants have appealed.

Gisele Pelicot, 72, has become a symbol of female courage and resilience during the three-month trial of her now ex-husband and his 50 co-defendants, in a case that has horrified the world. All were found guilty by the court on Dec. 19.

"He decided not to appeal, because he says it would be a new ordeal and new confrontations for his wife, who he always said in the debates was not his adversary," Dominique Pelicot's lawyer, Beatrice Zavarro, said on FranceInfo Radio.

Washington has separately provided approximately $61.4 billion in security assistance to Kyiv since the start of the war, according to the Pentagon.

Biden said the Defense Department is in the process of delivering hundreds of thousands of artillery rounds, thousands of rockets and hundreds of armored vehicles.

Iran confirms arrest of Italian journalist

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates – Iran confirmed the arrest of Italian journalist Cecilia Sala for "violating the laws of the Islamic Republic," Iran's official IRNA news agency reported on Monday.

Sala, 29, who works for the newspaper Il Foglio and the podcast company Chora Media, was detained in Tehran on Dec. 19, according to the Italian foreign ministry. Italy's Foreign Minister Antonio Tajani declined to say whether the case might be linked to the arrest of an Iranian in Italy this month at the request of the United States.
